

Creating Holiday Cards for Service Members

Christian Amaro, Assistant Site Supervisor

Each day there are service members who put their lives on the line for us. There is a family friend of Mr. Amaro who is currently deployed overseas and mentioned that sometimes something so simple can mean so much. With the holiday season closely approaching our students tapped into their creative side to create a variety of cards for our service men and women overseas.

These cards were packaged and shipped during the week of Thanksgiving, so should arrive south of Korea towards the end of December. I will be sure to keep our students informed about their arrival and share any word that I receive. It was fantastic seeing the students jump right into creating the cards. The students artwork and kind words will mean a great deal to those who will receive them.

Let's Build It!

Christian Amaro, Assistant Site Supervisor

One of the most popular clubs in the afternoon at Woodbrook is Let's Build It! This club allows our students to think creatively and critically. Each week they have the opportunity to work together to build amazing structures. Last school year, we purchased Keva planks and quickly noticed how interested our students were. This school year a full on club was launched after many inquiries about building planks. Everything has been built from houses and towers to ramps and tracks. Each Keva plank kit also comes with step by step guides that outline some of the more complex designs, which our students have easily taken on. The students also have had the opportunity to use their own imaginations when designing structures. This club allows for students to work together towards a common goal. New friends are made and a great deal of fun is had!
